Atrial natriuretic peptide (ANP) has been reported to be present in the renal tubule. In this study, we examined the distribution of ANP and transforming growth factor-alpha (TGF alpha) in renal and periureteral tissue and their putative effects on the development of the obstruction in a rabbit model. We have demonstrated the presence of TGF alpha in the periureteral tissue in higher amounts than in the adjacent renal tissue. TGF alpha receptor alpha 1 and alpha 2 mRNAs were detectable in both renal and periureteral tissue, and atrial natriuretic peptide receptor-A mRNA was detectable in the renal and periure
