I've been playing on PC since the original game came out, and I can honestly say that this is the.Jazz Manu Ginobili reported for duty with the San Antonio Spurs on Friday, but won't be in uniform on opening night against the Los Angeles Clippers (11 p.m. ET, ESPN). The veteran guard told the media Friday that he had a sprained right ankle and wouldn't be cleared until further notice. Ginobili says he didn't have time to properly heal the problem, which is why it took him so long to get to Texas. Reports suggest Ginobili is leaning toward an emergency operation to correct the problem. Ginobili says he is optimistic about the injury, but that won't help him heal. "We'll see," he says. UPDATE: Ginobili says he will play in the Spurs' exhibition game against the Sacramento Kings (10 p.m. ET, NBA TV) at the AT&T Center on Saturday. That means he will sit out San Antonio's opener, but he'll be available for the team's other preseason games. I know this is a three year old thread, but I didn't see anything new posted since then, so just wanted to add to the discussion. We ended up going with SW-DW, and although it was a bit of a struggle at times, it works great. We put the 4th and 8th controls between the seats in front of our kid, and the middle for ourselves. I don't feel I can rate this all that highly because it was a car I wanted very badly, and it was a brand I had always wanted to drive, but this one might be the one that sold me. The current wagon (stretch) is a beautiful car.

Great on gas and very fun to drive. The granddaddy of the current bunch is a true classic. The 2010+ are quite nice too. If you want something super luxury, the Grand Cherokee is amazing. You have to be in a hurry though... the new Z51 might be the last one built. I agree with everything above, the Gen. 4's are nice and they get better after you drive them a bit
