[A case of SMA with hypoplasia and oculoauriculovertebral complex anomaly]. A case of skeletal muscular atrophy with relatively distinctive craniofacial characteristics is reported. He was a newborn infant with a score of 8 on the Apgar scale. He showed poor sucking movements, eversion of the epiglottis, hypertrophy of supraclavicular muscle, weakness of the neck muscles, hypotonia, and contractures of the wrist and knee joints at his first examination. The muscle biopsy specimen of the right gastrocnemius showed reduction of type I fibers and of the dermal neuro-pil. Some myonuclei were also seen. Spinal muscle biopsy disclosed homogeneous type 2 fibers in the anterior compartment of the thigh. He had bilateral clubfeet and hypoplasia of the 5th and 6th toes. The diagnosis of SMA with oculoauriculovertebral complex anomaly was made. The severity of SMA correlated with the severity of ocular and auricular abnormalities.
